WINTER 2015-16

Welcome to the newsletter of the Friends of Ridge Wood. We are volunteers who look after the Wood and help to improve it for all who visit. Working with South Gloucestershire Council and the site owners Hanson Aggregates, the Friends undertake practical conservation work. This local nature reserve is a great place for everyone to explore the beauty of nature. The Wood has a fascinating history and some mysterious old features, and best of all – it is on your doorstep!

REVIEW OF 2015

We held several successful events in Ridge Wood in 2015. In May, local naturalist Ed Drewitt (whom you may recognise from the BBC's Springwatch) led a fascinating Evening Chorus walk through the woodland and attendees were rewarded with sightings (and soundings) of a fantastic variety of bird species both familiar (robins, blue-tits, dunnocks and wrens) and less common (bullfinches, a goldcrest and a mistle thrush). You can read a full review of this event on our website.

'Forest Fun Time', our fantastic family event in August, encouraged many younger visitors to explore the woods, following a quiz trail through the trees and then getting the chance to try out some woodland crafts, making twig pencils and willow crowns to take home. We are grateful to Hanson's for the generous financial support they provided. Due to its popularity, Forest Fun Time will return this Summer!

Finally, we held a Moth Discovery evening in October as part of the South Gloucestershire Council's Discover festival. Unfortunately a cold night resulted in fewer moth sightings than we hoped for but local moth expert Ray Barnett gave a fascinating talk and we plan to invite him back in the future.

While these events are both enjoyable and important in encouraging people to explore the reserve, an equally vital part of our work involves running our regular woodland work mornings throughout the year. Tasks undertaken in 2015 included snowdrop planting, clearance of brambles and blackthorn to allow wildflowers and other smaller plants to flourish, coppicing, native British bluebell conservation work, as well as general tidying and litter picking to keep the woodland looking at its best.

? DID YOU KNOW ?

Ridge Wood has a long and interesting history, and many clues to their past can be found if you look. Did you know...

- Camps are believed to have been located along The Ridge as far back as the Iron Age.
- A mansion house known as Ridge House once occupied the site of the existing Hanson offices. However, this was finally abandoned in the 1960's when the quarrying got a bit too close for comfort – it was reported that following blasting operations, rocks would fall through the roof!
- The wood is home several giant sequoias, also known as Wellingtonias, which originate from the western slopes of the Sierra Nevada mountain range in California. This species of tree are the largest in the world with some famously having a trunk wide enough to drive a car through! These formed part of Ridge House's pleasure gardens but the first plantations in Britain were established on the Duke of Wellington's estate in Hampshire – hence their popular name!
